REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

1. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

In regard to claim 1, the prior art of records fails to disclose:

"a computer on board the farm machine that is capable of receiving information from several sources, recording that information, and controlling multiple functions of the farm machine and the towed implement based on the information received, wherein the computer is programmed to record the previous movements of the farm machine and the portion of the farm field that has not been yet worked, and to automatically direct the towed implement to work the portion of the farm field that has not previously been worked".

In regard to claim 2, the prior art of records fails to disclose:

"a computer on board the tractor that is capable of receiving information from several sources, recording that information, and controlling multiple functions of the tractor and the towed implement based on the information received, wherein the computer is programmed to record the previous movements of the tractor and the portion of the farm field that has not been yet worked, and to automatically direct the towed implement to work the portion from one side to the other side of the tractor".

In regard to claim 4, the prior art of records fails to disclose:

Art Unit: 3661

"controlling the position of the towed implement based on information the computer receives from multiple sensors reading the tractor and implement functions and sensors reading the angular orientation of the towbar to the directions of motion of the tractor and the farm implement."

In regard to claim 6, the prior art of records fails to disclose:

"controlling the position and status of the implement based on information the computer receives from multiple sensors reading the farm machine and implement functions and the position of the implement relative to the farm machine ".
